HARVEST FESTIVAL

To Be Celebrated Next Saturday and Sunday by the Salvation Army.

On next Saturday and Sunday the Salvation Army of this city and in fact ing. all over the world will celebrate the harvest festival, one of the greatest days of the year in the army.

The celebration of the harvest festival is an old English custom which the Salvation Army has adopted. In England the harvest festival is a great occasion. The bakers, farmers, gardeners, merchants and almost everybody contributes goods or money to the Salvation Army and large sums are thus realized. The money so raised is spent to replentish the Army's poor Walnut street, in the presence of a fund and to push the work of the Army

In this country the harvest festival is a new thing, and although the Army succeeds in raising large sums of money on such occasions, the American people do not enter into it with the same zest that the Britons do. In this country the festival is looked upon by the people in the same light as the American Thanksgiving day.

Democratic Victory In Ohio Would Bring Free Trade Again to the Front, and Imperial Prosperity.

True to its principles, the Demo-An oyster supper will be given in means a renewal of the old fight Masonic hall on the evening of Oct. 24, against that wise and conservative protection under which the country has attained its greatest prosperity, Levi Mills, of Hookstown, will move another agitation in favor of further tariff legislation.

Do the people realize the effects on the employ of the government, who the business, the industries, and the prosperity of the country, which would be precipitated by another prolonged agitation for tariff reform? Have they forgotten the experience of 1890 and 1892, when the McKinley tariff was mercilessly assailed before the people, was denounced as a "robber" tariff, and finally overthrown through a wanton and reckless distortion of plain facts? The people, especally the bread-winners of the country, should fully understand the nature and full significance of a tariff reform victory in Ohio this fall, or a reduction of the vote which was given for McKinley, protection and prosperity last fall.

Such result would be hailed as a victory for tariff reform, or rather for a McIntosh sold two buggies last week substitution of a tariff for revenue for and went to Canton to purchase more. a system which protects and fosters Charles Russell and family, of American industries. And from the start which would be gained in Ohio. the Democratic party, the unrelenting foe of protection, would begin another crusade before the people for another tariff reform. The result would be just this: Capital would become timid, and as the agitation for tariff reform proceeded, would become frightened, and gradually begin to curtail operations in the mills and factories of the country until the full results of th agitation could be fully ascertained.

It should not be forgotten that the commercial and industrial greatness of this country is based squarely upon the system of protection-upon legislation by congress which favors the domestic producers at the expense of foreign manufacturers and labor, and that this system is under the control of congress, and consequently, the will of the people.

A successful agitation in favor of the Democratic tariff idea, which might be given a powerful impetus by the results of the election in Ohio this fall, would certainly precipitate a panic like that which overwhelmed the country in 1893. The fear of a Democratic revision of the tariff would act as a deadly blight upon our industries, and serve to throw millions of workingmen out of profitable employment. It would require a long time to determine with certainty the full effects of a Dmocratic revision of the carried through until a new congress should come into power; and then would follow a long and distressing period of doubt and uncertainty-like that which ensued btween the election of Cleveland in 1892 and the enactment of the Wilson tariff in September, 1894. The manufacturers would be compelled to wait until the effects of the new tariff could be determined, and in the meantime a great army of toilers would be reduced to idleness, and the soup kitchens would again come into operation.

A Republican victory in Ohio this fall, in McKinley's own state, will be regarded as a vote of confidence in the policy of protection which the fallen leader so ably championd. The election will be looked at as a barometer indicating the will of the people to continue the safe and conservative governmental policies under which the country has attained the zenith of its prosperity, or an indifference and apathy on that subject. The results of the election will generate a greater FY AT FEIST'S, WASHINGTON degree of confidence in the federal 110-r government, and will give a new and broad spheres of activity. Experience for fifty crucial years has shown that the Republican party alone can be safely entrusted with the administration of the federal government, and with the enactment of tariff legislation. The mighty industrial power of the country is based upon Republican tariff legislation, and protection to home industries; and whenever any tariff legislation is to be made, the duty should be entrusted to the Republican party alone, and not to that party which is the arch-enemy of the entire protective system. The Republican party, by its revision of the tariff, through the Dingley law, has demonstrated its ability to effect such legislation as will promote and protect American industries, and give the country a great measure of prosperity. The party now comes before the people of Ohio asking a full and emphatic endorsement of its work in behalf of protection and prosperity, a vote of confidence. Shall it receive that en-

REMEMBER THE WILSON BILL

Democratic Victory In Ohio Would Bring Free Trade Again to the Front, and Imperial Prosperity.

True to its principles, the Democratic party demands the "abolition of policy of a tariff for protection." This means a renewal of the old fight against that wise and conservative protection under which the country has attained its greatest prosperity, another agitation in favor of further tariff legislation.

Do the people realize the effects on the employ of the government, who the business, the industries, and the has been working in this vicinity for prosperity of the country, which would some months, will soon return to be precipitated by another prolonged Washington, D. C., where he will make agitation for tariff reform? Have they forgotten the experience of 1890 and 1892, when the McKinley tariff was mercilessly assailed before the people, was denounced as a "robber" tariff, and finally overthrown through a wanton and reckless distortion of plain facts? The people, especally the bread-winners of the country, should fully understand the nature and full significance of a tariff reform victory in Ohio this fall, or a reduction of the vote which was given for McKinley

Such result would be hailed as a victory for tariff reform, or rather for a McIntosh sold two buggies last week substitution of a tariff for revenue for and went to Canton to purchase more. a system which protects and fosters Charles Russell and family, of American industries. And from the Wellsville, were here a few days with start which would be gained in Ohio, the Democratic party, the unrelenting foe of protection, would begin another crusade before the people for another tariff reform. The result would be just this: Capital would become timid, and as the agitation for tariff reened, and gradually begin to curtail operations in the mills and factories of the country until the full results of

th agitation could be fully ascertained. It should not be forgotten that the commercial and industrial greatness of this country is based squarely upon the system of protection-upon legislation by congress which favors the domestic producers at the expense of foreign manufacturers and labor, and that this system is under the control Sunday in Wellsville with the mother of congress, and consequently, the will of the people.

A successful agitation in favor of the Democratic tariff idea, which might be given a powerful impetus by holding a concert at New Somerset the results of the election in Ohio this fall, would certainly precipitate a pan-Local merchants are all laying in ic like that which overwhelmed the country in 1893. The manufacturers would be compened to wait until the effects of the new tariff could be determined, and in the meantime a great army of toilers would be reduced to idleness, and the soup kitchens would again come into operation.

A Republican victory in Ohio this fall, in McKinley's own state, will be regarded as a vote of confidence in the policy of protection which the fallen leader so ably championd. broad spheres of activity. Experience for fifty crucial years has shown that the Republican party alone can be safely entrusted with the administration of the federal government, and with the enactment of tariff legislation. The mighty industrial power of the country is based upon Republican tariff legislation, and protection to home industries; and whenever any tariff legislation is to be made, the duty should be entrusted to the Republican party alone, and not to that party which is the arch-enemy of the entire protective system. The Republican party, by its revision of the tariff. through the Dingley law, has demonstrated its ability to effect such legislation as will promote and protect American industries, and give the country a great measure of prosperity. The party now comes before the people of Ohio asking a full and emphatic endorsement of its work in behalf of protection and prosperity, a vote of confidence. Shall it receive that endorsement?

With the finishing of the first quarter of the fiscal year of the government, we get a range on its financial condition. Congress calculated to cut the income by its tax reductions at least forty million dollars a year or $10,000,000 a quarter, but the general business of the country continues so large that the income keeps up, so that the actual reduction for the quarter is less than four million dollars compared with the same time last year. The total receipts for the three months amount to more than 143 mil lion dollars, and the expenditures were not quite 125 million dollars.

Thus it is the Republican reduction in expenses that is piling up a surplus, or would be piling it up, had not Secretary Gage used the opportunity to reduce the lebt. During the last three months he has bought in United States bonus of the face value of $19,500,000, for which he has paid over $24,000,000, releasing that amount for circulation. Since April 1st over $33,000 of interest-bearing bonds have been purchased by the government at a cost of $40,000,000.

There is a similar coincidence in this item of six millions or seven millions monthly reduction in the interest-bearing debt of the government, because it recalls a little table that was made when Cleveland was president the last time. That showed that 1865 to 1893 Republican rule had reduced the public debt by a monthly average of $5,700,000, so that the Mc-Kinley administration is doing better than the average of its Republican predecessors, and the contrast is even more remarkable from the Cleveland administration, which increased the public debt, adding a monthly average of $7,500,000.

In February, 1894, when Mr. Cleveland had been president less than a year, and without any war or outside disturbance, he had to borrow fifty million dollars, with twenty-five million dollars interest. In November of that same year he borrowed another fifty million dollars, with nearly twenty-four million dollars interest. The next year he borrowed $62,315,400 for the United States, with the enormous interest of $74,778,480. That was speedily used up in the current expenses of the government, and in 1896

The whole principal and interest was over 500 million dollars, a legacy left to the people by the last Democratic administration, and it is this

Harrisburg, Oct. 23 .- The Democratic state committee held a special meeting in this city to fill the vacancy on the ticket created by the decision of the Dauphin county court declaring invalid the nomination of Representative E. A. Coray, Jr., of Pittston, for state treasurer.

The meeting was held in the board of trade rooms and was attended by 75 of the 81 members, including the deposed members from Philadelphia. 2 o'clock by State Chairman Creasy After the meeting was organized Mr. Creasy explained that the purpose was to fill the vacancy created by the withdrawal of Mr. Palm, no mention being made of Mr. Coray's candidacy or the rejection of his certificate by the court. Charles Don-nelly, of Philadelphia, inquired of the chair if there was not a meeting of the committee held in this city ou Oct. 11. During the Civil war Mr. Ohl week commencing next Monday, fully realizing that his death is now a question of a few days, asked for spiritual consolation and received a visit from of the Roman Catholic church.

Czolgosz's request for a priest of his own nationality was made known to Warden Meade. Czolgosz declared his inability to do so, and he was informed that unless he could the consolation of the church would be denied him. The priest urged the condemned man to consider the matter carefully and told him that if at any time he decided to re-embrace the faith he would return from his home in Rochester and stay

While very reticent, Father Szandinski after much persuasion, said Czolgosz should not be made the the confessional was inevitable and that of course he could not divulge it. He said that inasmuch as there were hundreds of ignorant men who mistook Czolgosz's odious notoriety for fame, the more the man was advertised the more harm it would do to lead the rest to follow his example. Three priests, Father Father Szulza and Father Stadenon, who were with Father Szandinski, would not say what their business was with him, but all seemed familiar with Czolgosz and his recent actions. Father Stadenon admitted, however, that Czolgosz without the ban, was wholly incorrigible and an utterly worthless case.

Writing a Book.

The following confession of a novelist as to the method in which he wrote one of his books is not without interest. Then he got desperate. The chapter should be written and should stand, whether good or bad. He wrote it and left the house because it was bad and he had resolved not to tear it up. Next day he wrote chapter XIX, and on the morrow he rewrote chanter XVIII and somehow or other contrived to get into it all that he had failed to get before. Then he wrote chapter XX, and the book was completed.-London Post.

Obeyed Orders.

An old Yorkshire farmer was walking out one day looking very glum and miserable. He was a typical Yorkshireman, and he dearly loved a joke. But jokes seemed a long way off just then, and the old man was thinking deeply when he was accosted by a tramp, who made the usual request for a night's lodgings and something to eat, as he explained he had had nothing for two whole days. The effect upon the farmer when he said this was magical.

"Why, man," he said, "I've been looking for you all day."

And then without more ado he knocked him down and walked on him from one end to the other. The tramp got up, looking very staggered, and asked him why he had done that.

"Well," said he, "my doctor has ordered me to walk on an empty stomach. and now that I have fulfilled his injunction I can go and have a good feed. and you can come with me."-London Answers.

An excellent liquid glue that is very tenacious and almost dampproof can be made by dissolving glue in nitric ether and adding a few pieces of caoutchouc. Sitting here at my desk during the summer I have watched with much interest the different ways in which women take their vacations. Really original, resourceful ones generally go vacationing in a way out of the common rut. They do it unconsciously, without the vulgar idea of being different from The Tucker house, which obstructed other people just to attract attention to themselves. Some ladies have made a trip from New York to Boston or from Boston to New York and back by under open skies, blue or gray, but always glorious and expansive. Before the Fruit the Blossom

No Blossoms, No Fruit

THE farmer who would go around among his plants in the Spring, picking off the blossoms, would be considered little less than insine, for it would be evident to the simplest mind that the destruction of the blossoms would destroy the fruit. But how much more wise is the young man who, in the Spring-time of youth deliberately destroys his opportunities of getting a practical education, and thus as surely destroys his prospects for making his lifework a success? The blossom must precede the fruit. If it is neglected, or allowed to be destroyed, it cannot be replaced later in the season. So education has its own season, and its stern edict is Now or NEVER. Now is the time to form the n. Now is the time to form the blossom for the fruit you expect to gather. The perfect blossom is the harbinger of the perfect fruit that

CORRESPONDENT GAVE EVI-DENCE IN SCHLEY INQUIRY.

Heard Evans Tell Schley Texas Ran Away-Schley Told Him Brooklyn Turned.

Washington, Oct. 23 .- Lieutenant B. W. Wells, Jr., who was Commodore Spanish war, was again on the stand in the Schley inquiry, but he was soon displaced to allow Yeoman Albert V. Mason, who had written the Brooklyn's log for the period covering the Santiago campaign, to testify. Mr. Mason explained the erasures in the turn on the day of the battle off Santiago. He was followed by Mr. George E. Graham, who, as an Associated Press correspondent, was with Commodore Schley during the entire

Mr. Graham's testimony covered all the principal events of the campaign and discussed especially the bombardment of the Spanish ship Colon on May 31, and the sattle off Santiago, on July 3. Mr. Graham testified to hearing a conversation between Com-modore Schley and Captain Sigsbee, when the latter came aboard the flagship Brooklyn off Santiago, May 26. He said that he had distinctly heard Captain Sigsbee tell the commodore stores. that the Spanish fleet was not inside the harbor at Santiago.

Mr. Graham also stated that Admiral Schley had told him that the object of the bombardment of May 31 soon be ready for the plasterers. was to develop the Spanish land batteries, and he said that the range was fixed at 7,000 or 7,500 yards in order engagement, that he had heard no ability recover. conversation in which Commodore Schley had said that the officers in Schley and Captain Robley D. The Conversation With Evans.

The conversation between Schley and Evans occurred in the commodore's cabin, in the Brooklyn. Graham detailed it as follows:

Writing a Book.

The story had been with him so long that it was the easiest thing in the world to write it, and so he got through this part of the work with remarkable celerity. In the eighteenth chapter nothing happens. Every day for a fortnight he rose, breakfasted and tried to write that chapter; every night be tore up a big pile of manuscript which he got desperate. The chapter should be written and should stand, whether good or bad. He wrote it and left the house because it was bad and he had resolved not to tear it up. Next day he wrote chapter XIX, and on the morrow he rewrote chapter XVIII and somehow or other contrived to get into it all that he had failed to get before. Then he wrote chapter XX, and the book was completed.-London Post.

Obeyed Orders.

An old Yorkshire farmer was walking out one day looking very glum and miserable. He was a typical Yorkshireman, and he dearly loved a joke. But jokes seemed a long way off just then, and the old man was thinking deeply when he was accosted by a tramp, who made the usual request for a night's lodgings and something to eat, as he explained he had had nothing for two whole days. The effect upon the farmer when he said this was magical.

"Why, man," he said, "I've been looking for you all day." And then without more ado he knocked him down and walked on him from one end to the other. The tramp got up, looking very staggered, and

A Liquid Glue.

An excellent liquid glue that is very tenacious and almost dampproof can be made by dissolving glue in nitrie ether and adding a few pieces of caoutchouc. The solution must be allowed to stand a few days and frequently stirred. As the ether will only dissolve a certain amount of glue there is no danger of getting it too thick.

Before the Fruit the Blossom

No Blossoms, No Fruit

THE farmer who would go around among his plants in the Spring, picking off the biossoms, would be considered little less than insåne, for it would be evident to the simplest mind that the destruction of the biossoms would destroy the fruit. But how much more wise is the young man who, in the Spring-time of youth deliberately destroys his opportunities of getting a practical education, and thus as surely destroys his prospects for making his lifework a success? The blossom must precede the fruit. If it is neglected, or allowed to be destroyed, it cannot be replaced later in the season. So education has its own season, and its stern edict is now or NEVER. Now is the time to form the blossom for the fruit you expect to gather. The perfect blossom is the harbinger of the perfect fruit that will follow.

Practical education is the blossom, opportunity is the soil, study and application is the cultivation and success is the fruit.

"Listen, Constant," said Pratjean. "In the court I shall say the plaintiff was born a slave; his master never emancipated him. Emancipation must be express; it cannot be inferred from conduct. Born a slave, never emancipated, whence got he the right to sue and stand in judgment? Answer me that! First, the question, Has he the right to sue? If you can answer yes to that, only then the second question, ownership vel non. If you must answer no, then, though M. Quillebert owns him not, the plaintiff is out of court and cannot be heard. No right, no suit; that's all."

"That's so!" came from his auditors In enthusiastic chorus.

"Softly! Softly! Not so fast!" exclaimed Quillebert, thumping the table with his glass. "All that fine logic may do for the day of trial or it may not. The judge truckles to the Americans too much for my taste."

"He does," assented Pratjean. "Therefore," Quillebert continued, "we would be fools to run to him. Slow is the word. Delay, postpone, put off, tire them out, threadbare the case, starve it, so that when it finally gets into court it must be carried on a litter. You can do that, eh, Tibource?"

"That is my forte," the lawyer answered, chuckling.

"Meanwhile," Quillebert went on, "prove to your neighbors, your wives and daughters that it is all an abolition trick; that the people are being betrayed by this bragging American and the aping lowland creoles. Why, that Latiolais girl is already ashamed to speak French in company."

"Bah!" ejaculated three of the listeners and spat on the floor.

"When the true French get to understand rightly what this case means, Oakfell will not have courage to try it. or, if he does, the Judge will not dare to decide in favor of the negro." Quillebert emphasized this forecast with a noisy blow from his fist upon the table. "But, Constant," De Roux inquired,

"what about Leon in all this delay?" "I have considered that," Quillebert replied. "The rascal has gone, spirited away, of course, by Oakfell. I tracked him to the steamboat wood pile on the Atchafalaya near Simsport and will bunt for him no farther. If I win this case, I will sue Oakfell for $20,000 damages for abducting my jockey and $20,000 more for defaming me. I will reach him what it is to threaten a granddaughter, for I hold $6,000 of his

"And I at the church," said Portvie. "And I"-Dede's utterance was thick and his pose unsteady - "right here with me.'

"Never mind, Dede; you can be spared, but the rest of you will remember this when called as witnesses at court," he said to the others, writing in his note-

"Then"-Quillebert raised his glass-"I drink confusion to Americans and abolitionists and success to the sons of old Gascony."

"Down with the Americans! Victory to the Gascons!" cried every man, rising to his feet and emptying his glass.

Dede brought forth the nine flasks of hot rum and distributed them among the company for sustenance on their ride in the chill night air, and, quietly mounting horses and ponies, this remarkable gathering dissolved. The last to leave were Quillebert and Pratjean. The latter said admiringly:

"You are a genius, Constant." No fool, at least, I hope," laughed the latter, disappearing into the darkness of the swamp road. There were but two sessions of the court each year for the trial of suits of a civil nature, and these were arranged to meet the agricultural convenience of the people, one in February in advance of planting, the other in September before the commencement of harvest. Hence the procrastination prescribed by Quillebert was no very difficult feat. Dilatory pleas put in by Pratjean served to toll the case over two terms, spanning a year. His professional engagement in the court of another parish and the sudden sickness of Portvie, an important witness for Quillebert, certified in writing by Dr. De Roux, sufficed to carry it over the second year without trial. Throughout this space the interest and activity of Quillebert's adherents never flagged. It was the theme of talk at every store, cabaret and steamboat landing in the highlands, at every Saturday night gumbo ball and Sunday mass. At sessions of the court and police jury the attending crowds discussed it with ever increasing heat and bitterness, the prosecution of Quillebert and menace to Caucasian superiority constituting the beginning, middle and end of each symposium. Inevitably it took on somewhat of a sectional character, the rich planters of the lowlands being the sym-

Throughout this turbulence of sentiment Evariste held calmly aloof. Whenever the subject was obtruded upon him he dismissed it with the remark that he was neither a lawyer nor a politician. His brother regarded this indifference as in harmony with his poetic temperament and was not displeased. Evariste became more seclusive in habit. I entreat you to proceed no further in the lawsuit. To press it now would result only in your injury, but in no one's good."

The girl's speech was earnest and her prayerful face so beautiful that Oakfell gazed upon it in a wordless rapture until his very silence suddenly called him to reply:

"You say further prosecution of the suit could result in no one's good," he said, smiling. "What, then, becomes of Leon's freedom, which is its sole object?"

"Oh, but Leon is gone. M. Quillebert will never see him again." She spoke as one to whom had been unexpectedly given the opportunity of successfully closing debate by a word.

"Ah, mademoiselle, do you not know that under laws which now exist and are enforced by the courts of the United States Quillebert can take Leon wherever found, drag him back to this place, hitch him to a plow, whip him before each meal and compel him to sleep standing, and 'that man's last state shall be worse than the first?" "Impossible! Impossible! This is a Christian land," shudderingly exclaimed Estelle.

"It is possible, I assure you, and probable, for, as you well know, Quillebert is no Christian man, and, while I grant you this is a Christian land, yet Christianity forms no part of its law. This has been distinctly declared by its most august court," Oakfell answered.

The young man's face glowed with a warmth of feeling which his words but partially expressed. Estelle's soft eyes filled with tears of the supremest joy her life had yet known.

"Go, then, and may God befriend you and your noble cause," she said, giving her hand, upon which he was about to impress a burning kiss, but he checked the impulse and said:

"You but continue to befriend me and my cause, and all will be well."

Long after he had passed out of her sight she stood upon the veranda pressing her wildly throbbing heart and whispering to herself: "Oh, why are there not more men like this man?"

"I find no fault with your choice and thank you for your good wish," said Oakfell, who was soon flying upon his fastest horse to Marksville.

Plantation affairs concerned Evariste but little that day. Riding through the fields to place himself in evidence before the squads of laborers, he plunged into the very heart of the dark Choctaw swamp and gave himself up to thoughts blacker than its shades. He flung himself from the saddle and walked furiously to and fro through the tangled growth as the captive byena restlessly tramps his cage's length. He sat upon fallen trees with head buried in hands over which his long black hair fell as a pall upon expired hopes. He leaned on the patient, wondering horse, muttering curses on the conditions and persons that were the causes of his unhappiness. But in all this frenzy and wrath and mad acting he kept before him always and distinctly, as a registered oath, the purpose to possess Estelle, even at the cost of his brother's undoing should the Quillebert was at the office of Pratjean, scowling, morose, surly and deaf to his advocate's assurances of victory. If a gun cracks, they are not going to pay any attention to those prairie rabbits over there, but will fill Quillebert's body so full of lead that he would furnish shot for all their papabote hunting next summer."

"M. Jewett," said Pratjean, erecting his head with an air of offended dignity, "do you mean"-

"I mean just what I have said, Pratjean, and you understand me perfectly well." And Jewett stalked back to Oakfell's office in his customary deliberate gait.

"I will attend to him later," muttered Pratjean, the fright of this communication setting his lips to thumping violently. "Come in, Dede."

Shortly Dede and one other left the office and circulated among Quillebert's adherents, and thereafter a pent hush settled upon them.

Three women also had journeyed in from the lowlands-Mrs. Wyley, in charge of her son, to testify in behalf of Leon's freedom; Estelle Latiolais, pale and anxious, accompanying her grandfather, who had been summoned as a witness on the part of Quillebert, and Laure Luneau, with the mammoth buggy and giant mule, who, with steady look and bold speech, explained her presence to be only as a partisan of Quillebert. Mrs. Wyley and Estelle were the guests of good old Mme. Noreau, mother of the clerk of court, who lived not quite a street away from the courthouse, and, nearer still, Laure figuratively flung her banner to the breeze from the "Tollette de la Gascoigne," the little millinery shop of the petite and ancient Mlle. Bereaud, where she received marked respect 110 and 112 Sixth St., from the many who deferred to her as granddaughter of the doctress and to whom she sought to impart some of her own courage and energy.

Among the throng were a half dozen "f. m. c.'s," as the free men of color were in those days designated, who lingered silent upon the skirts of the groups, fearing to be spoken to, yet held by intensest interest within hearing of all that was going forward.

The one person who appeared unmoved by-indeed unconscious of-the passion which surged about him was Honore Victor Tailleur, judge of the district court now and for 22 years past. Only twice had his renomination been contested and then with results most discouraging to the competitors. He was of Gascon descent and poor through disastrous speculations of bis father and elder brother. His age was 57. Thirty-five years he had been a widower, his wife, the beautiful and plous Ernestine Lafon of Pointe Coupe, having died of yellow fever in their honeymoon. In commemoration of her he had ever since paid for a pew in the church at Marksville, but had never sat in it. He gave its use to poor women who could not rent pews. And her grave in the cemetery behind the church be visited daily, standing above it a brief moment with his head bowed in reverent meditation. His life was simple and studious. He read and reread Rousseau and Paine, adored the "Corpus Juris Civilis" and "Code Napoleon" and recognized only Martin, Kent and Marshall as doctors of American law. Gentle, just and brave, he had long held the chief place in the hearts of his people. His grave is somewhere on the battlefield of Perryville, in Kentucky, in an apple orchard, it is said, but no one has ever found it. As the judge's tall form and dark face, with kindly eyes and waving hair of iron gray, were seen moving toward the courthouse the throng gathered about him, returning his friendly greeting, and followed him, or as many as could gain entrance, into the courtroom, the raised benches of which and the aisle between being immediately occupied. It was noticed that the highland men appropriated those on the left facing the judge, the lowland men those on the right. Fifty or more, unable to get within, stood on the veranda on which the door of the apartment opened. Hundreds sat and squatted in the yard beneath the unclosed windows. The "f. m. c.'s" perched upon a portion of the fence inclosing the yard, their ponies hitched near by.

MASTER and SLAVE By... T. H. THORPE

"Listen, Constant," said Pratjean. "In the court I shall say the plaintiff was born a slave; his master never emancipated him. Emancipation must be express; it cannot be inferred from conduct. Born a slave, never emancipated, whence got he the right to sue and stand in judgment? Answer me that! First, the question, Has he the right to sue? If you can answer yes to that, only then the second question, ownership vel non. If you must answer no, then, though M. Quillebert owns him not, the plaintiff is out of court and cannot be heard. No right, no suit; that's all."

"That's so!" came from his auditors In enthusiastic chorus.

"Softly! Softly! Not so fast!" exclaimed Quillebert, thumping the table with his glass. "All that fine logic may do for the day of trial or it may not. The judge truckles to the Americans too much for my taste."

"He does," assented Pratjean. "Therefore," Quillebert continued, "we would be fools to run to him. Slow is the word. Delay, postpone, put off, tire them out, threadbare the case, starve it, so that when it finally gets into court it must be carried on a litter. You can do that, eh, Tibource?" . "That is my forte," the lawyer answered, chuckling.

"Meanwhile," Quillebert went on, "prove to your neighbors, your wives and daughters that it is all an abolition trick; that the people are being betrayed by this bragging American and the aping lowland creoles. Why, that Latiolais girl is already ashamed to speak French in company."

"Bah!" ejaculated three of the listeners and spat on the floor.

When the true French get to understand rightly what this case means, Oakfell will not have courage to try it. or, if he does, the Judge will not dare to decide in favor of the negro." Quillebert emphasized this forecast with a noisy blow from his fist upon the table.

"But, Constant," De Roux inquired, "what about Leon in all this delay?" "I have considered that," Quillebert replied. "The rascal has gone, spirited away, of course, by Oakfell. I tracked him to the steamboat wood pile on the Atchafalaya near Simsport and will bunt for him no farther. If I win this case, I will sue Oakfell for $20,000 damages for abducting my jockey and $20,000 more for defaming me. I will teach him what it is to threaten a Frenchman with lyuch law. And old Latiolais shall weep a bucketful of tears for the meddling of his pearly granddaughter, for I hold $6,000 of his

"Aye, yl yl! Leonidas be banged!" cried Dede, and the glasses clattered approval.

'So you see there is a fine campaign, with spoils for you, Tibource," said Quillebert.

"And planned with the skill of a general," the lawyer declared, his mean little eyes sparkling, while his tongue caressed the jumping lips.

"And now" - Quillebert produced notebook and pencil - "which of you has heard Leon admit he was my slave?"

"I at the race track," answered Jadot. Brille and Tithout.

"And I at the church," said Portvie. "And I"-Dede's utterance was thick and his pose unsteady - "right here with me.' "Never mind, Dede; you can be spared. but the rest of you will remember this when called as witnesses at court," he said to the others, writing in his note-

"We will, sure, sure, sure," they promised, and he returned the book to his pocket.

"Bon!" said Quillebert. "Fulgence, tell old grandpere to let you have must gun, and I will pay him for it mext Thursday. Aristides, come to me tomorrow and sign a new note at one year. I'll give you the old one and not count the interest. Martin, you can come and drive those two sows home any time after tomorrow. Homer, tell Tatin to pay your taxes and bring the receipt to me, and I have a pretty silver cross for your little girl Felice. Fill your glasses, my friends. It is late. Dede, have you the flasks ready, as I wished?" "Every one full, corked and in the hot ashes," Dede assured him pom-

"Then"-Quillebert raised his glass-"I drink confusion to Americans and abolitionists and success to the sons of old Gascony.

"Down with the Americans! Victory to the Gascons!" cried every man, rising to his feet and emptying his glass.

Dede brought forth the nine flasks of hot rum and distributed them among the company for sustenance on their ride in the chill night air, and, quietly mounting horses and ponies, this remarkable gathering dissolved. The last to leave were Quillebert and Pratjean. The latter said admiringly:

"You are a genius, Constant." "No fool, at least, I hope," laughed the latter, disappearing into the darkness of the swamp road. There were but two sessions of the court each year for the trial of suits of a civil nature, and these were arranged to meet the agricultural convenience of the people, one in February in advance of planting, the other in September before the commencement of barvest Hence the procrastination prescribed by Quillebert was no very difficult feat. Dilatory pleas put in by Pratjean served to toll the case over two terms, spanning a year. His professional engagement in the court of another parish and the sudden sickness of Portvie, an important witness for Quillebert, certified in writing by Dr. De Roux, sufficed to carry it over the second year without trial. Throughout this space the interest and activity of Quillebert's adherents never flagged. It was the theme of talk at every store, cabaret and steamboat landing in the highlands, at every Saturday night gumbo ball and Sunday mass. At sessions of the court and police jury the attending crowds discussed it with ever increasing heat and bitterness, the prosecution of Ouillebert and menace to Caucasian superiority constituting the beginning, middle and end of each symposium. Inevitably it took on somewhat of a sectional character, the rich of Quillebert. As the administration of President Buchanan approached its close rumors of abolitionist aggressiveness grew in frequency and proportion and so charged the public mind with combustible ideas that the simple mention of this lawsuit caused a number of small explosions in the form of fisticuffs within the courthouse yard, even "under the drippings from the eaves of the tem-To the women and children of the uplands, many of whom had never seen him, the name of Oakfell was as execrable as Judas Iscariot's. Throughout this turbulence of sentiment Evariste held calmly aloof. Whenever the subject was obtruded upon him he dismissed it with the remark that he was neither a lawyer nor a politician. His brother regarded this indifference as in harmony with his poetic temperament and was not displeased. Evariste became more seclusive in habit. He rode often and far into the solitudes of the swamps, where the deep shade accorded with his somber mood. Rivalry with Horace for the hand of Estelle he felt was hopeless while his sole expectancy of fortune power ever be given him. was from his brother's grace, and his visits to the Latiolais mansion were made at intervals of increasing length. degenerating into brief formalities, but to the combat. he bitterly cursed his dependence and silently fed the flame of passion within joined by supporters at every plantahis pent breast. I did not then foresee this dreadful result, but today I am quite a woman and know I had no right to involve you so grievously for the gratification of a mere whim of mine. I entreat you to proceed no further in the lawsuit. To press it now would result only in your injury, but in no one's good."

The girl's speech was earnest and her prayerful face so beautiful that Oakfell gazed upon it in a wordless rapture until his very silence suddenly called him to reply:

"You say further prosecution of the suit could result in no one's good," he said, smiling. "What, then, becomes of Leon's freedom, which is its sole ob-

"Oh, but Leon is gone. M. Quillebert will never see him again." She spoke as one to whom had been unexpectedly given the opportunity of successfully closing debate by a word.

"Ah, mademoiselle, do you not know that under laws which now exist and are enforced by the courts of the United States Quillebert can take Leon wherever found, drag him back to this place, hitch him to a plow, whip him before each meal and compel him to sleep standing, and 'that man's last state shall be worse than the first?"

"Impossible! Impossible! This is a Christian land," shudderingly exclaim-

"It is possible, I assure you, and probable, for, as you well know, Quillebert is no Christian man, and, while I grant you this is a Christian land, yet Christianity forms no part of its law. This has been distinctly declared by its most august court," Oakfell answered.

What, then, are courts, Mr. Oak fell?" she demand d, astonished.

"They are huma i institutions for the interpretation and enforcement by man yet humanity is the least of their attri-

"And before such you will persist with this case, so unpopular and so burtful to you?"

"I will, because there is no other tribunal to appeal to; I will, because to abandon this wronged man to the law's cruelty in the face of the brutish mob's threats would be cowardly, traitorous to my standard of honor and unworthy of your respect, mademoiselle, which, I trust, I have and will endeavor to merit. I will fight this fight to the end for the sake of the right and, just because you did inspire it, for the sake of you.'

The young man's face glowed with a warmth of feeling which his words but filled with tears of the supremest joy her life had yet known.

"Go, then, and may God befriend you and your noble cause," she said, giving her hand, upon which he was about to impress a burning kiss, but he checked the impulse and said: "You but continue to befriend me and my cause, and all will be well." Long after he had passed out of her sight she stood upon the veranda pressing her wildly throbbing heart and whispering to herself:

"Oh, why are there not more men like this man?"

thank you for your good wish," said Oakfell, who was soon flying upon his fastest horse to Marksville.

Plantation affairs concerned Evariste but little that day. Riding through the fields to place himself in evidence before the squads of laborers, he plunged into the very heart of the dark Choctaw swamp and gave himself up to thoughts blacker than its shades. He flung himself from the saddle and walked furiously to and fro through the tangled growth as the captive byena restlessly tramps his cage's length. He sat upon fallen trees with head buried in hands over which his long black hair fell as a pall upon expired hopes. He leaned on the patient, wondering horse, muttering curses on the conditions and persons that were the causes of his unhappiness. But in all this frenzy and wrath and mad acting reau, mother of the clerk of court, who he kept before him always and distinctly, as a registered oath, the purpose to possess Estelle, even at the cost of his brother's undoing should the

Tariff Question Forced to the Front by Democrats

Washington, Oct. 23.—The records IN OHIO PLATFORM THIS YEAR.

What the Result Would Be If This State Would Indorse the Democratic Ticket and Platform.

The Democrats of Ohio are waging a campaign on the tax question, but the real object of their attack is protection, the great principle which underlies Republican prosperity and success. The Democrats have never been manded money of their captive, and champions of tax reform, and have never accomplished anything to equalize the burdens of taxation. But they have ever been, and still are the relentless foes of protection; and the tax issue serves as a covert mask for the attack thereon. A Democratic victory this fall would, therefore, be hailed as a victory not for tax reform, but for tariff reform, and might set in motion another agitation in favor of further tariff legislation which would be ruinous to prosperity.

The protective system is the creature of congress, and anything which indicates an intention by the people, vails and becomes the policy of the sion. Electoral action is looked upon throwing them out of work. as an unfailing capital and industrial operations are regulated. An election which indi- to open their doors in competition took a bicycle ride into the country cates or assures any radical change in tariff legislation, often serves to curtail the operations of our mills and trusts, is the Republican reciprocity factories. So, an election which negatives a proposition for tariff reform servs to restore confidence in the manufacturing interests, and increase the tory in Ohio this fall would be looked upon as an emphatic endorsement of McKinley's tariff policy under which the country has attained the zenith of prosperity; and such a victory would destroy the tariff agitation which the Democrats hope to launch as a result of the Ohio election. Such a victory would, moreover, generate a strong wave of confidence in the industrial world, and serve to increase the scope of operations, and means of employment for labor. A Democratic victory, on the other hand, would set in motion another destructive tariff agitation, would weaken confidence, and curtail industrial operations, and throw great numbers of workmen out of employ-

A Democratic victory in Ohio this fall would be proclaimed as an endorsement of the "traditional" Democratic policy of a tariff for revenu and from that might spring another prolonged tariff agitation like that which assailed the McKinley tariff in 1890, and 1892. Such agitation would fright en the manufacturers and force them to curtail operations until the result of the agitation could be determined by the electoral action of the people. him as the basis of the eminence he If then, the result of the agitation was in favor of a Democratic revision of the tariff, another disastrous panic like that of 1893, would sweep over the country: for the manufacturers would realize that the protective system would be doomed, and suspend operations until the storm passed

> Then we should experience-with infinitely worse results-the awful effects of that period of doubt and uncertainity which settled over the country when the announcement of Cleveland's election was made in 1892, until the Wilson tariff was enacted in September, 1894, and a vast army of wage-earners would be cast into the street and fed at the soup kitchens.

The Republican party has erected the tariff system, and given the country its all-powerful industrial prestige. The Democratic party is the archenemy of the protective system, and would rip up and exterminate it without mercy if given power to do so. Therefore, whenever any tariff revision is to be made, th eduty should be entrusted to the Republican party, which is bound to conserve and extend th entility of the sytems. But if free trade is to be established, then the task should be entrusted to the Democratic party. It is not a question of tariff revision, of protection, or a tariff for revenue, but of protection or free trade. There is no middle ground.

The Republicans of Ohio ask an endorsement of their work in restoring prosperity through wise protective and financial legislation, the twin agents of progress. Such endorsement, given by the voters in an emphatic manner, will greatly strengthen the hands of the national administration, will generat a great measure of confidence among capitalists and manufacturers, and prolong the golden era of prosperity that v now enjoy. Shall that endorsement be given?

WAGES IN ENGLAND.

Reduction to the Steel Workers There and Its Effect Here.

How would the iron and steel workers of the United States have liked it If a reduction of wages had been made, amounting in all to 20 per cent against them, since the first of the current year? That is the report from English friends in the same trade, and there is no certainty that the bottom has yet been touched. The lower English wages go the deepet will be the cut in American wages if the Ohio Democratic platform preacting through congress, to effect a country. That has always been its radical change in the tariff, is looked effect, as the Wilson tariff very sharpupon by the industrial interests of the ly demonstrated to vast armies of cratic policy, that compels our people with the lowest wages of the world, under the pretext of smashing the policy. That widens and extends and develops for American products other markets in other countries, but always and invariably in lines that do not compete with our own citizens. An overwhelming Republican vic- That is the saving and qualifying clause of the Republican national platform, and that reservation is plain and distinct in President McKinley's Pan-American address at Viffalo, and President Roosevelt's remarks on the same subject at Minneapolis. The Democratic doctrine is one of destruction and trouble. Republican reciprocity is not free trade, limitless and unrestrained, but the exchange of our own markets for other markets in a way the past experience has demonstrated to be beneficial to both countries interested. Senator Foraker can be counted upon to stand by the United States in such a policy, and to sustain President Roosevelt in bringing it about. Will Ohio stand by Foraker and Roosevelt, or will McKinley's state go back on McKinley and McKinley policies for the destructive ness of Democratic free trade?

> Much curiosity is felt to know upon what grounds the Democratic party of Ohio is going to ask support in this year of our Lord, 1901. With the adthat the Republican policy of protection is the proper one and the recent admissions that the attempt to radically change the currency system was not justified, it is difficult to understand upon what basis they will ask a change in administrative policy .- To-

The Democrats have never been champions of tax reform, and have never accomplished anything to equalize the burdens of taxation. But they have ever been, and still are the relentless foes of protection; and the tax issue serves as a covert mask for the attack thereon. A Democratic victory this fall would, therefore, be hailed as a victory not for tax reform, but for tariff reform, and might set in motion another agitation in favor of further tariff legislation which would be ruinous to prosperity.

The protective system is the creature of congress, and anything which radical change in the tariff, is looked sion. Electoral action is looked upon throwing them out of work. as an unfailing barometer by which tariff legislation, often serves to cur- under the pretext of smashing the tail the operations of our mills and trusts, is the Republican reciprocity factories. So, an election which negatives a proposition for tariff reform servs to restore confidence in the man- markets in other countries, but alufacturing interests, and increase the sphere of operations. An overwhelming Republican vlctory in Ohio this fall would be looked upon as an emphatic endorsement of platform, and that reservation is plain McKinley's tariff policy under which the country has attained the zenith of prosperity; and such a victory would destroy the tariff agitation which the Democrats hope to launch as a result of the Ohio election. Such a victory would, moreover, generate a strong wave of confidence in the industrial world, and serve to increase the scope of operations, and means of employment for labor. A Democratic victory, on the other hand, would set in motion another destructive tariff agitation, would weaken confidence, and curtail industrial operations, and throw great numbers of workmen out of employ-

A Democratic victory in Ohio this fall would be proclaimed as an endorsement of the "traditional" Democratic policy of a tariff for revenu and from that might spring another prolonged tariff agitation like that which assailed the McKinley tariff in 1890, and 1892. Such agitation would frighten the manufacturers and force them to curtail operations until the result of the agitation could be determined by the electoral action of the people. If then, the result of the agitation was in favor of a Democratic revision of the tariff, another disastrous panic like that of 1893, would sweep over the country; for the manufacturers would realize that the protective system would be doomed, and suspend operations until the storm passed

Then we should experience-with infinitely worse results—the awful effects of that period of doubt and uncertainity which settled over the country when the announcement of Cleveland's election was made in 1892, until the Wilson tariff was enacted in September, 1894, and a vast army of wage-earners would be cast into the street and fed at the soup kitchens.

The Republican party has erected the tariff system, and given the country its all-powerful industrial prestige. The Democratic party is the archenemy of the protective system, and would rip up and exterminate it without mercy if given power to do so. Dallas, Texas, Oct. 23.-John Pearl, Therefore, whenever any tariff revision is to be made, th eduty should be entrusted to the Republican party, which is bound to conserve and extend th eutility of the sytems. But if free trade is to be established, then the task should be entrusted to the Democratic party. It is not a question of tariff revision, of protection, or a tariff for revenue, but of protection or free trade. There is no middle

The Republicans of Ohio ask an endorsement of their work in restoring prosperity through wise protective and financial legislation, the twin agents of progress. Such endorsement, given by the voters in an emphatic manner, will greatly strengthen the hands of the national administration, will generat a great measure of confidence among capitalists and manufacturers, and prolong the golden era of prosperity that valow enjoy. Shall that endorsement be given?

WAGES IN ENGLAND.

Reduction to the Steel Workers There and Its Effect Here.

How would the iron and steel workers of the United States have liked it If a reduction of wages had been made, amounting in all to 20 per cent against them, since the first of the current year? That is the report from their English friends in the same trade, and there is no certainty that the bottom has yet been touched. The lower English wages go the deepet will be the cut in American wages if the Ohio Democratic platform presurgents. They finally passed under indicates an intention by the people, vails and becomes the policy of the acting through congress, to effect a country. That has always been its effect, as the Wilson tariff very sharpupon by the industrial interests of the ly demonstrated to vast armies of country with the gravest apprehenmen, cutting down their wages or

In sharp contrast with this Demopolicy. That widens and extends and FOR RENT-Two furnished rooms, develops for American products other ways and invariably in lines that do not compete with our own citizens. That is the saving and qualifying clause of the Republican national and distinct in President McKinley's Pan-American address at Viffalo, and President Roosevelt's remarks on the same subject at Minneapolis. The Democratic doctrine is one of destruction and trouble. Republican reciprocity is not free trade, limitless and unrestrained, but the exchange of our own markets for other markets in a way the past experience has demonstrated to be beneficial to both countries interested. Senator Foraker can be counted upon to stand by the United States in such a policy, and to sustain President Roosevelt in bringing it about. Will Ohio stand by Foraker and Roosevelt, or will McKinley's state go back on McKinley and McKinley policies for the destructiveness of Democratic free trade?

Much curiosity is felt to know upon what grounds the Democratic party of Ohio is going to ask support in this year of our Lord, 1901. With the admissions made in the past campaigns that the Republican policy of protection is the proper one and the recent admissions that the attempt to radically change the currency system was not justified, it is difficult to understand upon what basis they will ask a change in administrative policy.-Toronto Tribune.

He argued that council should deal fairly with the commissioners, and concluded by making a motion that Thomas McLaughlin, to whom the contract for doing the work was let some this balance will be increased, and time ago, he instructed to proceed every dollar of the state debt will have under the supervision of the street

Mr. McLane filed an immediate protest. He said that the city had no the constitution of the state, because right to do the work; that it was llegal and under the jurisdiction of the commissioners. Mr. Marshall ex-110-j plained that it was not only the aping it known to the people of Ohio. proaches that needed filling, but that the road for a distance west of the bridge was in a dangerous condition and needed attention without delay.

Solicitor Gaston, who was in consultation with the commissioners a few days ago, stated that they had given him to understand they would do nothing more at Dry Run unless compelled by the courts to do so. When asked if it would be illegal for taxes paid by the railroads under the council to improve the road leading general laws that have been in operaup to the fills the solicitor said it would not.

Dr. Marshali replied in answer to question asked him that he thought the fills could be made and the road improved at a cost not to exceed $500. Mr. McLane objected to the expense, contending that it should be borne by the commissioners. Then as an amendment to Dr. Marshall's motion, Mr. Nice asked that the street committee be allowed not more than $300 to ex- under all Democratic administrations, pend on the improvement. This was and every cent of it comes from the objected to by Dr. Marshall and he corporations that the Democracy and Mr. McLane indulged in a wordy war in which considerable sarcasm figured. Other members took a turn in the controversy, but when a vote was taken on the amendment it carried. Then the original motion was voted on and also carried.

The ordinance to institute condemnation proceedings to get possession of a tract of land for street purposes at the intersection of Pennsylvania avenue and Robinson street was placed on final reading and passed.

An invitation was received from W. L. Thompson, asking council to inspect Thompson boulevard. Clerk Hanley was instructed to notify Mr. Thompson that the invitation would be accepted and the park inspected at a future date.

President Nice was succeeded in the chair by Mr. Heddleston long enough to allow him to register a "kick" against the East Liverpool Railway company. The president had grievous fault to find with the service rendered its patrons by the company. He stated that the Italians which are employed by the company frequently crowd into the small cars and force ladies to stand.

"Why." declared the speaker, "I have seen those 'Yellow Hams' climb into the cars like a drove of cattle and crowd men's wives out of a place to sit down." He then arraigned Manager Healy in caustic terms and declared that the street car service was a disgrace to the city. In concluding his remarks Mr. Nice made a motion that a committee be appointed by council to confer with Mr. Healy in an effort to have more cars on the line. The motion carried.

Mr. Marshall stated that a switch was being built by the street railway company near the fill at the Dry Run bridge, which, he thought, should be moved back a distance where the road is wider. The company will be notifled to comply with Mr. Marshall's suggestion.

The street committee was instructed to look after a foot bridge on Virginia avenue in the East End which needs repairs and also a pair of steps on Ambrose avenue. Other minor business was also disposed of.

LIGHTER TAXES

The Outcome of Republican Legislation In Ohio.

REVENUES INCREASED ONE-HALF

As the Result of Laws Passed Since Ohio Came Under Republican Ru? After Campbell's Administration.

What an absurd and unjust falsehood is the Democratic campaign pre tense that their party is the only one that will talk about state affairs, and particularly that the Republican party is afraid to say anything about the finances and public interests of the state of Ohio! The last state Demoers concerning the fills. He insisted the state in debt two million dollars more than the present debt. That Democratic administration was borrowing funds from the county treasurers, anticipating the revenues, in order to pay current expenses. When work. Dr. Marshall contended that if account of the civil war, $339,682 of it had not been understood by the that sum was immediately snatched up commissioners that the city would by the Democratic administration for a culvert at Dry Run instead of the state would have been bankrupt without it, and unable to pay its everyday bills.

Under Governor Nash, the last fiscal year closed with a balance in the treasury of $1,520,910. A year hence been paid off, except the sacred fund set aside for public school purposes, and never to be reduced, according to its income is to be used for that special and peculiar purpose. The Republicans rejoice in this record. They are proud of it, and they glory in mak-

Nay, more, they are particularly proud of the way this financial result has been achieved. They point to nearly $500,000 a year received from the railroads of the state in excise tax upon their gross receipts in Ohio, as one item of annual income that has been secured for the state by Republican legislation, and that in spite of Democratic opposition and obstruction. This is additional to all the tion since the constitution was made effective nearly 50 years ago, and that still continue in full force, yielding last year $2,925,000.

As another such item, they point to $161,406 received in the past year by the state from electric light, natural and artificial gas, pipe-line, waterworks, street railway, messenger and signal, express, sleeping car, and freight line companies. This is a resource that the state was destitute of shielded and that the Republicans have compelled to pay up.

Another great gain to the general fund of the state treasury has been from the tax upon the liquor traffic, which yielded last year to the general revenue fund of the state treasury $1,132,000, by reason of the higher rate imposed and the larger proportion paid to the state, as compared with $460,323 in the first year that this tax was in operation. These are the results of Republican rule, and other like achievements along the same line will be accomplished until it is hoped, so far as the state of Ohio is concerned. to relieve the general taxpayer of all assessments for the state treasury.

POLITICAL COMMENT.

The affairs of the state of Ohio were never in better shape than under the administration of Governor Nash. -Canton Repository.

Senator Hanna is most popular man in Ohio if the demand for him at headquarters is an index. The senator is booked for from one to three speeches for every day of the campaign, and hundreds of towns which wanted him will have to be satisfied with a lesser light.-North Baltimore Beacon.

The Enquirer should offer prizes to subscribers based on the proposition "How bad are we licked, anyhow?"-Portsmouth Blade.

Governor Nash's administration has been a good one for the people of the state. He should be re-elected and his policies continued .- Canton Repository.

John R. McLean is another man who does not seem to know there is a campaign on in Ohio.-Toledo Blade.

What's the little game of the Hon. Charles W. Baker, of Cincinnati, the Adonis of Hamilton county, who announces his candidacy for the senatorship in the event of the election of a Democratic legislature? Is he a stalking horse for John R. McLean?-Mansfield News.

The alleged candidacy for the United States senate of Hon. Charles W. Baker, of Cincinnati, will fool nobody. It is well known that Baker's candiday is in the interest of John R. Mc-Lean. If the legislature should be Mr. Orr was the only absent mem. Democratic, Baker would turn over to and McLean have a perfect understanding with each other.

nace will not cremate garbage with-At Rock Springs park last evening out causing a stench he will quit of

> After getting the garbage matter off their hands the city fathers took up the Dry Run bridge proposition. Mr. McLane called attention to the necessity of making improvements in the road at that point. He said that because the agreement which had been made between certain members of council and the county commissioners was not being complied with was no reason why the citizens should suffer.

> Dr. R. J. Marshall took the floor and told about the agreement which had been made with the commissioners concerning the fills. He insisted that inasmuch as the commissioners had built a substantial bridge at Dry Run, with the understanding that the city would make the fills to the approaches, council should not back down when its turn came to finish the work. Dr. Marshall contended that if it had not been understood by the commissioners that the city would make the fills they would have erected a culvert at Dry Run instead of the bridge. He argued that council should deal fairly with the commissioners, and concluded by making a motion that Thomas McLaughlin, to whom the contract for doing the work was let some committee.

Mr. McLane filed an immediate proright to do the work; that it was illegal and under the jurisdiction of the commissioners. Mr. Marshall explained that it was not only the approaches that needed filling, but that the road for a distance west of the bridge was in a dangerous condition

Solicitor Gaston, who was in consultation with the commissioners a few days ago, stated that they had given him to understand they would do nothing more at Dry Run unless compelled by the courts to do so. up to the fills the solicitor said it would not.

Dr. Marshall replied in answer to question asked him that he thought the fills could be made and the road improved at a cost not to exceed $500. Mr. McLane objected to the expense, contending that it should be borne by the commissioners. Then as an amendment to Dr. Marshall's motion, Mr. Nice asked that the street committee be allowed not more than $300 to expend on the improvement. This was and Mr. McLane indulged in a wordy compelled to pay up. war in which considerable sarcasm figured. Other members took a turn in the controversy, but when a vote was taken on the amendment it car- which yielded last year to the general ried. Then the original motion was voted on and also carried.

The ordinance to institute condemnation proceedings to get possession of a tract of land for street purposes at the intersection of Pennsylvania avenue and Robinson street was plac ed on final reading and passed.

An invitation was received from W L. Thompson, asking council to inspect Thompson boulevard. Clerk Hanley was instructed to notify Mr. Thompson that the invitation would be accepted and the park inspected at a future date.

President Nice was succeeded in the 110-tf chair by Mr. Heddleston long enough to allow him to register a "kick" against the East Liverpool Railway company. The president had grievous fault to find with the service rendered its patrons by the company. He stated that the Italians which are employed by the company frequently crowd into the small cars and force ladies to stand.

"Why," declared the speaker, "I have seen those 'Yellow Hams' climb and crowd men's wives out of a place to sit down." He then arraigned Manager Healy in caustic terms and declared that the street car service was a disgrace to the city. In concluding his remarks Mr. Nice made a motion pository. that a committee be appointed by council to confer with Mr. Healy in an effort to have more cars on the line. The motion carried.

Mr. Marshall stated that a switch was being built by the street railway company near the fill at the Dry Run bridge, which, he thought, should be moved back a distance where the road is wider. The company will be notifled to comply with Mr. Marshall's sug-

The street committee was instructed to look after a foot bridge on Virginia avenue in the East End which needs repairs and also a pair of steps on Ambrose avenue. Other minor business was also disposed of.

Mr. Orr was the only absent member when the meeting was called, but he arrived later.

LIGHTER TAXES

The Outcome of Republican Legislation In Ohio.

Under Governor Nash, the last fiscal year closed with a balance in the treasury of $1,520,910. A year hence this balance will be increased, and time ago, te instructed to proceed every dollar of the state debt will have under the supervision of the street been paid off, except the sacred fund set aside for public school purposes, and never to be reduced, according to test. He said that the city had no the constitution of the state, because its income is to be used for that special and peculiar purpose. The Republicans rejoice in this record. They are proud of it, and they glory in making it known to the people of Ohio.

Nay, more, they are particularly proud of the way this financial result has been achieved. They point to and needed attention without delay, nearly $500,000 a year received from the railroads of the state in excise tax upon their gross receipts in Ohio, as one item of annual income that has been secured for the state by Republican legislation, and that in spite of Democratic opposition and obstruction. This is additional to all the When asked if it would be illegal for taxes paid by the railroads under the council to improve the road leading general laws that have been in operation since the constitution was made effective nearly 50 years ago, and that year $2,925,000. As another such item, they point to $161,406 received in the past year by the state from electric light, natural and artificial gas, pipe-line, waterworks, street railway, messenger and signal, express, sleeping car, and freight line companies. This is a resource that the state was destitute of under all Democratic administrations, and every cent of it comes from the objected to by Dr. Marshall and he corporations that the Democracy

These are the results of Republican rule, and other like achievements along the same line will be accomplished until it is hoped, so far as the state of Ohio is concerned, to relieve the general taxpayer of all assessments for the state treasury.

POLITICAL COMMENT.

The affairs of the state of Ohio were never in better shape than under the administration of Governor Nash. -Canton Repository.

Senator Hanna is most popular man in Ohio if the demand for him at headquarters is an index. The senator is booked for from one to three speeches for every day of the campaign, and hundreds of towns which wanted him will have to be satisfied with a lesser light.-North Baltimore Beacon.

Governor Nash's administration has been a good one for the people of the state. He should be re-elected and his policies continued .- Canton Re-

John R. McLean is another man who does not seem to know there is a campaign on in Ohio.-Toledo Blade.

What's the little game of the Hon. Charles W. Baker, of Cincinnati, the Adonis of Hamilton county, who announces his candidacy for the senatorship in the event of the election of a Democratic legislature? Is he a stalking horse for John R. McLean?-Mansfield News.

The alleged candidacy for the United States senate of Hon. Charles W. Baker, of Cincinnati, will fool nobody. It is well known that Baker's candiday is in the interest of John R. Mc-Lean. If the legislature should be Democratic, Baker would turn over to McLean what votes he had. Baker and McLean have a perfect understanding with each other.

Gold imports have begun again. The money is due to the United States calls for it.

As the Result of Laws Passed Since Ohlo Came Under Republican Ru? What an absurd and unjust false-tense that their party is the only one that will talk about state affairs, and particularly that the Republican party is afraid to say anything about the finances and public interests of the state of Ohio! The last state Democratic administration, when it went out of power, nearly ten years ago, left the state in debt two million dollars more than the present debt. That Democratic administration was borrowing funds from the county treasurers, anticipating the revenues, in order to pay current expenses. When the United States paid back to the state of Ohio the money advanced on account of the civil war, $339,632 of that sum was immediately snatched up by the Democratic administration for current expenses of Ohio, because the state would have been bankrupt without it, and unable to pay its everyday
